

ePregnancy

UP) front

Bright Idea
Father's Day Flower Power

Forget that old necktie tradition and celebrate dad's first Father's Day with flowers. "Men love to get flowers. They're intrigued, especially by very different, very contemporary varieties," says Casey Cooper, owner of Botanicals in Chicago. When choosing blooms, she suggests avoiding giant, multi-flower bouquets and pastel tones in favor of simple, monochromatic arrangements. Cooper likes orchids — especially the reasonably priced and widely available dendrobium and jamestorie varieties — because they're graceful and demand a clean presentation. Or simply select a few stems in dad's favorite color. Unique vases are also tops with pops. Cooper suggests using ceramic containers in earth-toned glazes or glass vessels filled with river stones or accented with an interesting leaf treatment. — JBD

BRIGHT IDEA

Father's Day Flower Power

FORGET THAT OLD NECKTIE TRADITION and celebrate dad's first Father's Day with flowers. "Men love to get flowers. They're intrigued, especially by very different, very contemporary varieties," says Casey Cooper, owner of Botanicals in Chicago. When choosing blooms, she suggests avoiding giant, multi-flower bouquets and pastel tones in favor of simple, monochromatic arrangements. Cooper likes orchids — especially the reasonably priced and widely available dendrobium and jamestorie varieties — because they're graceful and demand a clean presentation. Or simply select a few stems in dad's favorite color. Unique vases are also tops with pops. Cooper suggest using ceramic containers in earth-toned glazes or glass vessels filled with river stones or accented with an interesting leaf treatment. 🍀